

2017

CHAIR
Barry McCarthy
Executive Vice President
Network and Security
Solutions
First Data

CO-CHAIR
Dave Cole
Managing Director of Georgia Public Sector
IBM

CO-CHAIR
John Yates
Partner
Morris, Manning &
Martin LLP

MAC Staff

Grant Wainscott
Senior Director of Technology
Ecosystem Expansion
404.586.8462
gwainscott@macoc.com

David Hartnett
Chief Economic Development Officer
404.586.8443
dhartnett@macoc.com

Atlanta is one of the fastest-growing high-tech metros in the nation – and your company can grow along with us.

Affordable, Innovative, Accessible

With more than 189,000 workers in the industry and approximately 14,000 tech establishments, Atlanta is known as the hub for software, internet security, transaction processing, digital media content, mobility, wireless applications and services, smart grid technologies and more. From startup rock stars like MailChimp, Yik Yak, Kabbage, Cloud Sherpas and Salesforce.com, to global brands such as AT&T Mobility, Sage Software, NCR, IBM, First Data, AirWatch by VMware, GE Energy and others, innovative tech companies call Atlanta home.

Get connected. Get involved. Make a difference.

A collaborative effort of the region's technology leaders, the Metro Atlanta Chamber (MAC) Technology Leadership Council (TLC) aims to strengthen the regional technology ecosystem.

The Technology Leadership Council meets four times a year for approximately 1 ½ hours.

What's in it for you and your company?

- Connect with top technology leaders
- Help attract and grow technology companies and jobs
- Meet with industry peers and do business with MAC member companies

How You Can Help

- Give us a lead. Share information about a client or company you know is considering expanding or relocating in the southeastern United States or metro Atlanta.
- Join a committee. Board of Advisor members are eligible to serve on leadership committees.
- Share valuable research or market information that we can share with our prospects, such as wage rates or data on new companies locating to metro Atlanta.
- Get involved in our marketing efforts. Help us position Atlanta as a premier business location for technology companies.